SECURITY IS CALLED KEY TO CONTROVERSY

Legal and Commercial Relations Found Strengthening Between Reich and Republic

By LINDSAY ROGERS Professor of Public Law at Columbia University

VIENNA-It is frequently said that the peace treaties forbid the union of Austria and Germany and that until they are changed union cannot take place. This is not the case. The powers that framed the treaties did oppose union. They forced a change the German Constitution which looked to a possible union and ar-ranged for Austrian representatives with the consent of the Council of the League of Nations." That, under pres-consent to the union. The London Times entered the debate and mildly what could be done to indemnify Austria (in such ways as customs agreements) if permission was refused for the union. To the Times article the Journal des Débats replied by declaring that evidently there were still many Englishmen who were "far fron: discerning the fatal consequences for the peace of formation of a great Germany."

of France as the prize which must The Locarno agreements, to be sure, do guarantee that security, but the psychology of the peace conference has not been entirely dissipated. Even to the evacuation of the Rhineland, the Right political parties are firmly opposed. In the peace treaties and in her diplomacy afterward, France sought to insure security by several different methods. Territory was to be taken from Germany; reparations were to be paid for a long period; the army of occupation was to hold certain important areas; Germany was to be disarmed under international supervision; French sup-port to succession states like Czechoslovakia and Poland was to help them become so strong that they could withstand German aggrandizement. France valued these guarantees far more highly than the general guarantee of the League of Nans, or the special Anglo-American guarantee of protection to which President Wilson consented.

England and Russia Approach an Accord BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

An INTIMATION that great progress has been made toward the resumption of diplomatic relations between Great Britain and Russia is contained in an official statement just issued.

An agreement, it says, has been reached on the list of subjects to be settled by negotiations on the resumption of relations including an exchange of ambassadors. Conversations between Arthur Hen son, Foreign Secretary, and M. Dovgalevsky, Russian Representative, lasted two hours.

The fact that not sufficient interest was being shown in the work of the farmer is one of the causes of his difficult position, it was said. The capital invested in industry, for instance, was much larger than that invested in farming. It was recommended that capital be offered at low rates to co-operative farming societies. Farm hands, moreover, should be enabled to purchase land. Also the spreading of wireless to farm districts was strongly advocated.

AREN'T you weary of tending fires and handling ashes? Aren't you tired of furnace dirt, soiling and begriming every nook and cranny of your house? Wouldn't you like a clean cellar and a heater you would never have to touch?

As an answer to these questions, during the last three years more than 150,000 families have supplied their homes with the heating conveniences which only gas can provide.

With Gas-The Better Fuel-you need expend no more effort for your winter heat than for the summer warmth the genial sun provides. Your gas company lights the pilot, you set the upstairs indicator; and from then on a constant temperature is maintained, whatever the weather outside.

Gas heat is immaculately clean. No greasy soot rises from it to settle in a dingy stain on furniture, walls and rugs. Every woman who has watched her furnishings lose their freshness and grow grey and drab will know what a blessing that is.

Call on your gas company for a demonstration of modern gas heating. It offers the utmost in winter comfort that you can possibly find.

in a superlatively fine manner is an artist.

We remember two artists who lived in a small country town some years ago. One was a man of very limited education as education is usually measured, but he had a seeing eye house, and so the cook was dismissed. By turns the two daughters and an understanding heart. The sight of a field which he had just plowed remains in our memory as sone of the most satisfying sights we have ever seen. There was a big elm tree in the middle of that field, around it were the freshly turned furrows, each one, to the very end of the field, describing a widening circle bending to the form of the circle around the old tree. It was as circle around the old tree. It was as Beach to Miami, their cakes were though some unseen hand had tossed that tree into the sea of soil which soid at wholesale to restaurants, was the field and the ripples it made on the surface followed one another on the surface followed one another to the shore. There were a few siands in that field; places where clumps of grass remained undisturbed. Poor plowing, said some, but those of us who were in the confidence of the workman knew that there were birds' nests in those clumps of grass and that they would remain undisturbed by any plow guided by his hand. An artist indeed!

Freedom Through the Truth

MANY references occur in the Bible to "the fowls of the air," to their freedom, and to the loving care bestowed upon them by the heavenly Father. Instinctively, one feels pity for a caged bird, for the fluttering wings indicate that its aspiration is to fly.

Christ Jesus made it plain that the Father who cares for the birds values

Father who cares for the birds values man even more, and provides for his happiness. Yes, for his every need! Through a faint discernment of God's But the truth that he comprehended infinite love and goodness the writer was not then understood in its full-was many years ago lifted out of a ness, and he promised that the "Comsense of bondage, mental and physical, which had held her for a long truth," which would "guide . . . into period. It is interesting to note, in connec-tion with the greatly expedited New York-Chicago schedules of both the Pennsylvania and the New York Cenral railroads, that airplane competi-tion cannot be cited as a reason for the faster service, for the Allegheny Mountains form an obstacle to suc-cessful passenger transport by air which has not yet been overcome. The action of the railroads was largely a response to popular demand for faster trains. It means additional profit to the railroads, for with faster trains, the amount of extra fares increase.

As one compares the new schedules the two railroads, released the same day, the similarity is remarksame day, the similarity is remark-able. Each road suddenly established 20-hour limiteds from New York at 2, 3, and 4 p. m., and eastbound limiteds at similarly equivalent times. It is of note that the public interest would better have been served by "staggering" the schedules of these 20-hour trains, rather than operating them competitively, although it is a fact that there is small latitude in the selection of hours when a demand would exist for such

The Listener Speaks

THREE people whose work is very familiar, but whose voices are known to few, were heard in the course of the Fleischmann Hour at 8 o'clock on Thursday through the behind the glass screen of the Crys-tal Room at the Radio World's Fair in company with various other nota-bilities also on public exhibition,

Changes in Train Numbers

Such as that recently tested by the canadian National Rallways, is now of the probable sound of the voice of someone whose picture we often see the through New England trains which will continue in the "170" class, excepting the State of Maine, which will be Nos. 111 and 142 and the construction costs, thus far, are so through his works. Bebe Daniels'

The Federal Express, Colonial and Senator acquire new numbers, however, as do the two-hour New York-Philadelphia trains which will run, in order, from No. 202 to 233. Every train between 7 a.m. and 10 p.m. will make a flat two-hour time between these points.

Travelers Appreciate It!

As you step in you'll sense the Will-to-Serve . . . the warm friendliness . . . the personal effort to make you comfortable at Chicago's Hotel Knickerbocker.

Cur fiver accommodations are just a matter of having built iarger rooms, designing them to be more cheerful...furnishing them amortly, and installing the most luxuriously comfortable beds that money could buy. Our lower rates were just a matter of fairness to the traveling public and a determination to offer a bigger hotel value. Our location was "made-to-order" for accessibilty plus peace and quiet. And to all that we've added a human equation in service to make you feel content and perfectly at home here. You'll enjoy stopping at Chicago's Hotel Knickerbocker. When are you coming to Chicago? . . . At your service!

Unexpected Increase in Loans to Brokers Bear Factor in Stock Market

NEW YORK (P)-The stock market tried value to overcome the bearish influence of an unexpectedly large increase of $192,000,000 in Fed-eral Reserve brokers' loans, but the selling orders were so large that the market was swamped, and prices broke de open.

A score or more high-priced stocks oke 19 to 25 points, while declines 2 to 8 points were quite general recognition the list.

Call money renewed unchanged at 9 r cent, with indications that the rate pull be maintained all day. Time they rates held firm at 9 to 9% per not.

Wall Street was trying hard to determine the effects here of the raising of the Bank of England discount rate, some observers contending that the action blready had been discounted, and would have no effect on the credit situation here, while others feared that it would lead to a heavy withdrawal of foreign balances as a result of the action of other central European hanks in raising their bank rates in sympathy with London.

The market opened heavy, but pool operators quickly supplied supporting orders and started bidding up special stocks in which favorable developments are believed to be pending. Standard Gas & Electric was marked up 24 points to a new high record at 2:3, and American, Water Works 14 to a new high at 1:9, but when seiling developed in the general list Standard Gas quickly sild back to 2:30, and American Water Works to 1:90, Burroughs Adding Machine, Underwood, Elliott-Fisher and Pacific Lighting also moved into new high ground in the early raily, but failed to maintain their gains. Wall Street was trying hard to dethe early rally, but falled to maintain their gains.

Meanwhile, buying support apparently was being withdrawn from the high-priced issues, and offerings of stock disclosed a thin market. Auburn Auto broke 25 points, Columbian Carbon 15. Alilled Chemical 13%, A. M. Byers 13. Westinghouse Electric 11%, Johns-Manville 11½, Simmons Co. and American, & Foreign Power 11 each, and General Electric 10¼.

Extreme declines of 5 to 10 points took place in such stocks as U. S. Steel common, Columbia Gas, Republic Steel, du Pont, Commercial Investment Trust, Eastman Kodak, American Can, United Aircraft, Consolidated Gas, New York Central, Public Service of New Jersey, Houston Oil, Safeway Stores and Electric Auto Lite.

Market Closes Weak,

Market Closes Weak ,

The absence of support in recent market leaders proved extremely discouraging to small traders and investors, many of whom threw their stocks overboard at the market. So great was the flood of offerings that the ticker fell more than 10 minutes behind the market. Wall Street was curious to learn the Wall Street was curious to learn the Wall Street was curious to learn the market operations of investment trusts, some of which were reported to be liquidating their holdings, while others were reported to be accumulating special stocks on a scale down.

The severity of the break impaired many markin accounts, and brought considerable liquidation from that source.

Another forward movement was started in the western group of the utilities in the last hour, and Standard Gas & Electric was lifted to 243%, a new ton

American Water Works returned to 188½ and Southern California rose 4, and Pacific Lighting 6, also new highs, while Industrial Rayon advanced 12½. The general list, after rallying, turned downward again in Sympathy with another drop in U. S. Steel asd Radio.

The close was weak, Sales approxi-mated 4,400,000 shares, Foreign exchanges opened irregular, with sterling cables a shade lower at

Bonds Irregular

Issues with speculative possibilities drew a nominal following on the bond market today, but otherwise the list was dull and uninteresting, showing irregularity in the early trading. Time money was firmer with little demand, and no offerings were reported below 9½ per cent for all maturities.

Dealings in Liberty bonds were so slight that no transactions appeared for more than an hour after the market opened. The few sales that then trickled in were at minute declines.

Convertibles moved within a narrow range, but were mostly lower in sympathy with the opening softness of stocks. American Telephone 4½s lost more than 3 points. Investment trust debentures with share features sold off fractionally, while Reading Coal & Iron 68 traded only slightly below the previous close. previous close.

clines. Western Union bonds advanced about a point.

New offerfines included a $4,450,000 issue of Central Vermont Public Service Corporation first 5s, due in 1959, priced at 96, and a $2,500,000 issue of Province of Alberta 30-year 5s at 99.

Word of a prospective new foreign issue was received in Wall Street today. The Bankers Trust Company, it was learned, has concluded arrangements for a $20,000,000 State of Saxony loan, conditional upon consent of the Reich authorities. COMMODITY PRICES

BROOKMIRE SEES BONDS AT LOW EBB

Total new financing by means of bonds was lower in August than for several months, says the Brooking Fectorial Service, Inc., in its latest review of the investment situation, which says: "Any liquidating movement in the stock market, or even a pronounced check of the upward trend, would undoubtedly drive considerable capital from the lower yield to the higher yield type of security. "While a liquidation period in the stock market does not seem imminent, the outlook for certain lines of industry indicates irregularity within the next few months.

"As credit conditions are not likely to tighten much further, there seems to be a strong probability that the bond market is somewhere near the bottom."

Transfer Agent: United States TRUST Co., Boston

THE TRUST AND ITS PURPOSE

UNITED SECURITIES TRUST ASSOCIATES, a trust having transferable shares, has been formed in Massachusetts under a Declaration of Trust, dated September 25, 1929, to invest and deal in stocks and securities of all kinds, to participate in syndicates and underwritings, and to exercise such other of its powers as its Trustees may from time to time determine. The Trust affords investors the opportunity of participating, under competent management, in a wide range of investments and in financial operations which would not be available to them as individuals. The Trust is authorized to borrow an amount not in excess of the net fair

All stocks and securities held by the Trust will be lodged with the United States Trust Company, of Boston, as principal custodian.

The Trust will have $10,000,000 in cash in its treasury at the commencement of business, after payment of all expenses in connection with the organization of the trust and the sale of the 200,000 shares now being offered. The capital of the Trust in respect of these 200,000 shares will be $10,000,000, and any amount received as principal custodian.

in excess thereof will be paid in surplus available for dividends and all other purposes of the Trust.

The United States Trust Securities Corporation, a wholly owned subsidiary of the United States Trust Company, of Boston, will purchase 20,000 of these shares for $1,000,000 cash.

The Trust proposes to file with the authorized officer of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts the statutory form of agreement for the payment of the Massachusetts Income Tax by the Trust, so that dividends of the Trust to shareholders resident in Massachusetts may be exempt from such tax.

There are no options on any unissued shares and no subscription rights of any description except to all shareholders alike that would tend to dilute the actual value of the Trust's shares.

THE TRUSTEES: The Trustees, all of whom are members of the finance committee and officials of the United States Trust Company and United States Trust Securities Corporation, both of Boston, are:

The Trustees are all men of wide experience in banking, investment and general business fields and recognized for their marked managerial ability. They are the men who have been responsible for the remarkable success of the United States Trust Company, of Boston, which possesses the enviable record of having paid substantial dividends in every year since its start in 1895, and the stock of which has shown great appreciation in value. Some of the Trustees have been associated with the Trust Company since its inception.

MANAGEMENT FEE: The affairs of the Trust and the investment of its funds will be managed and administered by United States Trust Securities Corporation, a wholly owned subsidiary of United States Trust Company, of Boston, under a management contract running from year to year after 1930. For such services, including the provisions of office facilities, bookkeeping, investment research, custodians' charges and expenses, and any compensation to the trustees and officers of the Trust, the Securities Corporation will receive quarterly compensation, as limited by the declaration of trust and such contract, of 1/4% of the net fair value of the trust property.

The foregoing is subject to the complete provisions of the Declaration of Trust to which reference is hereby made.

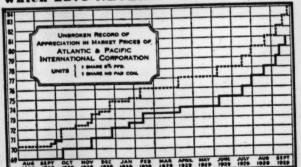

Copies may be obtained upon request.

These shares are offered subject to allotment or prior sale and in all respects when, as and if issued and delivered and accepted by us and subject to the approval of counsel, Messrs. Ropes, Gray, Boyden & Perkins, of Boston. We reserve the right to reject any and all subscriptions in whole or in part. It is expected that delivery of certificates will be made on or about Oct. 4, 1939, at the office of the United States Trust Company, Boston, against payment therefor in Boston or New York Funds.

HATRY ASSOCIATES ON TRIAL FOR FRAUD

LONDON (P)-The Guild Hall Court as crowded today when Clarence Hatry, London financier, and three associated in companies known as the Hatry Group, whose activities were suspended on the Stock Exchange last week, reappeared to answer charges of unlawfully conspiring to obtain £209,-141, or about $1,045,000, by false pre-141, or about $1,045,000, by take pretenses.

At the outset the prosecuting attorney, H, D, Roome, stated the defendants forged and issued certificated corporation stock on Gloucester. Wakefield and Swindon corporations to the amount of at-least £900,000.

After the hearing the defendants were again remanded to Oct. 4. Bail was refused the defendants.

The Senate investigators also have determined to go into the Govern-ment's secret files to find out if there are any records there of Mr. Shearer, who has been represented to the committee as being on the records of Scotland Yard.

Pending the resumption of the investigation when Mr. Shearer will be called the Senators are awaiting bord from the naval officers who were hamed by Drew Pearson, a newspaper correspondent, as associates of Mr. Shearer, Mr. Pearson was at Geneva at the time of the conference. If the naval experts should fail to answer Mr. Pearson's statements, the committee is ready to summon them.

In this new pursuit he gathered about him a group of earnest young litterateurs who came to be known as the Pléiade. On Toward Land Disarmament

THE resolution which Viscount Cecil recently introduced before the League of Nations Assembly on the subject of disarmament covers a good deal more than meets the eye. Ostensibly it was regarded as a resumption of the attack on the system of excluding trained reserves from the computation of military strength which both the British and the American Governments had made in the past, and which they both apparently abandoned some months ago. As such, it encountered vigorous opposition from all the nations, headed by France and Italy, which recruit their armies by a system of universal conscription, and received vigorous support from Germany and other disarmed powers and many smaller countries which fear the powerful armies of their neigh-

The case of trained reserves, on its merits, is not a simple one. At first sight it seems obvious that men who, having been trained in a conscript army, have passed to the reserve, so that they can be called up year by year for short "refresher" courses, and be available within a few weeks or days for war, should be included in military strength. But, the conscript countries reply, conscript armies have nothing like the efficiency of long-service professional armies, reserves have very little value at all until they have once more been put through a period of training, and to count them on a numerical basis is to give an advantage to nonconscript armies.

These countries further claim that conscription, so far from being militaristic in its effect, is more pacific and more democratic than professional armies, which are often militaristic, whereas national armies are almost always peace loving. Lord Cecil himself did not lay much stress on the trained reserves question. and expressed the opinion that strict limitation of war matériel was a more profitable road of advance. For the real issue which underlies his resolution goes deeper than the question of reserves. It is whether ratification of the Pact of Paris and the success which has already attended naval negotiations between President Hoover and Ramsay MacDonald are going to lead to real measures of disarmament in Europe.

Hitherto there has been more talk than success at various disarmament conferences at Geneva. This perhaps has been natural, for not only have but ten years elapsed since the peace which closed the most terrible war in history, but the Covenant of the League of Nations still permits resort to war as a final court of appeal. open to the nations after all pacific methods have failed. Yet, if war is lawful under international law, it is only common sense to prepare for the day when it comes, and prepare in such a way as to insure victory. But last August in Paris a peace pact whereby nations renounced war entirely as an instrument of national policy, and undertook never to settle their disputes nacific methods was so

It is this pact which has proved the foundation for the successful Anglo-American naval negotiations. A new basis for attack on European armaments has therefore just come into being. and Lord Cecil's resolution was clearly designed to give notice that the British Government intended that a fresh start should be made at the next disarmament conference, and that things should not be allowed just to drift on in the desultory, inconclusive manner in which they have done hitherto

That is the true cause of the commotion. For the underlying fact in Europe today is that there is a military predominance in the hands of France and her associates for the purpose of maintaining the Treaty of Versailles. Any serious measure of all-round disarmament means an end, or at least a diminution, of that predominance. What security will France and her allies then have that equality in armaments will not be a prelude to an attempt to upset treaty settlements? That is the real issue which underlies the land disarmament question in Europe.

An exact answer is not yet in sight, but fundamentally the answer is once more the Pact of Paris-that attempts to alter peace treaties by war are renounced and that the rest of the world will see that the pact is respected. All these issues lie hidden in the resolution introduced by Lord Cecil at Geneva, and under the compromise resolution try now go forward to be considered by the next disarmament conference.

The I. Q. With a Little Salt

TANDARDIZED intelligence tests have become such an accepted part of the curriculum in countless schools and colleges of the United States that many parents find it necessary for their children's sake to subject this type of examination to scrutiny. Indeed, the intelligence test, and its result, the I. Q., or intelligence quotient, are at present so strongly intrenched as recognized means of classifying students and children, as well as of determining employees in some businesses, that they have forced themselves into public thought. Even many teachers who are admittedly slow to the test as an absolute criterion of a student's capabilities are inclined to believe that the findings of intelligence tests over a period of time indicate at least something which will bear investigating.

The method of applying the I. Q. needs to be watched, but not to be feared. Enough disagreement exists concerning it to indicate that even with all its air of finality it is but a process, a manifestation of human measurement in a stage of development. The psychologists who work on it are foremost in advising educators to maintain toward it the open-minded attitude of the laboratory. If children at any point are being too rigidly classified by it, parents have every right as well as the backing of the technicians in demanding that at least it be a servant, not a

Is it not true, however, that with all the methods of measuring and comparing which human beings have devised throughout the ages, no technical yardstick has been systematized that can gauge the true qualities of character with any accuracy? The I. Q. may measure, but it leaves out the realities, and it is these very realities that decide what manner of child or young person is taking part in the academic

Individuals cannot be pigeonholed. Manifestations of genuine mental unfoldment cannot be laid along a foot rule. It is what a person does with his one talent or five that counts; and what he has the worth to do cannot be measured by any human scheme, however fine, yet devised Interesting the intelligence test and its results may be; but all-important and final they are not. The world is full of examples of changing values—the world of the natural sciences most of all. The I. Q. is having its day. It need disturb no parent or child, for it cannot measure the

Mr. Hoover Makes It Plain

RXCEPT among those who have, perhaps unintentionally, misconstrued or misunderstood what President Hoover has several times stated and reiterated, there has been no doubt as to the Chief Executive's views regarding tariff legislation at the present special session of Congress. The desire to misunderstand or to misinterpret what he has said has been indicated quite frequently during the last four or five months by senators and representatives who have sought reasonable or convincing defenses for their own conduct in advocating more general changes in existing schedules than were declared necessary by Mr. Hoover in his campaign speeches and in his message to Congress.

Assuming a license to indulge in a general revision, the champions of this program evidently have made it appear logical to another group, the coalition formed by Democrats and so-called Progressive Republicans, to array a substantial number in opposition to the law now in force which gives to the President the authority to increase or decrease any tariff rate 50 per cent upon recommendation of the Tariff Commission. Under the same authority the President may reject such recommendations if

Under this section of the act there has been possible a flexible adjustment of duties made to accord, as nearly as practicable, with changed or changing industrial and economic conditions. Seldom in the past has it been deemed necessary, when the Republicans have controlled Congress, to raise or lower tariff duties even to the extent of 50 per cent. This being the case, it would logically follow that a President, acting upon the advice of a bipartisan or nonpartisan board or commission, would find it possible from time to time to make all necessary changes and adjustments of tariff duties.

But Congress, having once delegated this authority, seems to find it convenient to return to its old task of revising or rewriting numerous schedules. Thus the opportunity is presented to those senators and representatives who seek a selfish advantage for industries of one section or state to attempt to enact legislation particularly beneficial to those they hope to serve. Similarly those who claim still to disagree with the protective tariff policy find the opportunity to strike more or less effective blows in furtherance of their cause. The so-ca avowed champions of decentralization of power, would gladly aid any movement which would discredit the flexible tariff theory.

With the pronouncement issued by the President, the cards are all on the table. No member of either house of Congress can hide behind the plea that he has not been advised regarding the position of the Republican Party as a unit, or the position of the Chief Executive as the titular head of that party. Those Republicans who lend aid or sympathy to any coalition antagonistic to the policies enunciated can hardly justify a claim to party regularity.

New Cabinet for Austria

THE sudden resignation of the Streeruwitz Cabinet and the assumption of the Premiership by Herr Schober will tend to delay the amendment to the Constitution which Dr. Ignaz Seipel, Clerical ex-Chancellor of Austria. has been pressing for acceptance. This proposed amendment would increase the powers of the President and lengthen his term of office to seven years. It has to come before Parliament, however, where it must receive a two-thirds majority, and it faces a hostile vote of the Socialists, who hold about 40 per cent of the seats. Its passage, therefore, is by no means certain. But the bulk of the people of Austria would rather see the question settled amicably than by a resort to force, which Dr. Seipel threatened if his demand for a revision of the Constitution

The proposed reform Dr. Seipel has been urging over a considerable period, and it is bruited in Vienna that his eagerness springs from a desire to take over the Presidency himself. In that office he would be in a position to continue his policy of curbing the autonomy of the province of Vienna, which is practically in the hands of the Socialists, and of establishing a Roman Catholic university at Salzburg. He-has made no secret of his intentions, and strength is lent to his assertions by the support he receives from the semi-Fascist Heimwehr, the private political army of the Christian Socialists.

The serious clashes which have not infrequently occurred between the Heimwehr and the Schutzbund, the private army of the Social Democrats, have kept the political situation in Austria in constant turmoil. An end is sought to the anomalous situation and it is believed that if peace could be assured by constitutional reforms the opposition to them would diminish. As it is, because of the conflicting interests of parties much-needed economic measures are blocked, and financial assistance from outside powers is delayed. Hence the growing demand for an end to political dissension and a redoubling of effort in the work of economic re-

Miller J. Huggins

TILLER J. HUGGINS, in the many years that he was identified with baseball, proved himself possessed of qualities of leadership beyond the ordinary. As both player and manager, he endeared himself to many, and became widely recognized as a man whose influence upon the game he was so closely associated with was always of a most inspiring nature.

Cincinnati, the city that gave to baseball its first professional team, also gave Miller J. Huggins to the game. It was there that he made his début as a player. His first attempt at managing a major league team was with the St. Louis Cardinals in 1913. From them he went to the Yankees in 1918, with whom he remained.

Baseball is swift in its managerial changes, only the fittest surviving the test of many campaigns. With the Yankees, a team of spectacular, individual stars, the manager has to combine a superior understanding of baseball with a keen knowledge of how to handle men. That Miller Huggins did this with remarkable success is attested by the fact that he twice won three straight pennants and put his club through two straight World Series without a defeat, an accomplishment never duplicated. The American League has had in him a great baseball student, the Yankees a great manager, and the players them "lves a stanch friend.

The Rift in the Fog

VIATION has lifted its wing tips above the A barrier of fog and now is riding on high hopes for the rapid conquest of this "greatest enemy" of flight. As the result of a year's intensive effort, aided by some of the Nation's leading aviation experts, the Daniel Guggenheim Fund for the Promotion of Aeronautics has transformed "hlind" flying from guesswork to mathematical certainty.

In the final test flight, Lieut. James H. Doolittle successfully piloted his airplane with its cockpit covered. He saw nothing besides the illuminated instrument board before him, but he took off, circled for fifteen miles and then landed almost on the very spot from which he had left the ground. Three new devices made his feat possible, and aeronautical authorities believe that these are sufficiently developed to warrant their use on air mail planes within a short time.

The improvement of the radio beacon to a point where it gives visual indication of the pilot's deviation from his set course plays an important part in the new control. A supersensitive altimeter registers the height of the plane to within a few feet of the earth, enabling it to land even if the pilot cannot see one inch of the ground beneath him. An instrument which indicates the lateral and longitudinal position of the plane supplies another link making for complete control of flight.

The development of the fog-flying technique undoubtedly is the most important of the Guggenheim Fund's notable contributions to aviation. Aviators long have looked forward to the time when the dangers of fog would be dissipated. Now the rift has appeared through which is visible a new measure of safety for those who travel with wings.

It's Quite the Thing

THE monogrammed and crested stationery of society, bearing messages which must be never abased by conveyance through any but the most approved channels, may now with on its way by air mail department is reported to have declared the air service as socially correct. Figuratively and literally the department has established the status of the air mail on a very high plane.

Hereafter there need be no embarrassment in shipping out a batch of wedding invitations by air. Engagements for society's most exclusive functions may be properly negotiated through this new medium of communication. The airplane has gone beyond its nomadic period. It has become a thing of regular habits, and quite as capable of discharging with poise and dignity all the obligations which long rested almost exclusively on the reliable old steam locomotive.

These special couriers of the air should provide an ideal agency for the interchange of billetsdoux. The grace and abandon with which these great messengers speed through the skies are in themselves an inspiration and an encouragement to the promotion of romance. What would not D'Artagnan have given to have been able to turn a few handsprings into the cockpit of an airplane and, amid the roar of its exhaust, fly to a new field of adventure? Surely the air mail represents an ideal instrument for social correspondence.

Taming the Northern Wilderness

THE lunch bell starts ringing even before the transcontinental pulls into the station. The train comes to a halt alongside the little station and its lunch room, set down beside the Hudson's Bay Company post, in the Canadian northland. There is a rush of passengers for the lunch counter. They are French Canadians, mostly, with a sprinkling of sunburned prospectors, who have kicked their knapsacks under a plush seat for the journey. Far back around the curve, on the end of this same long train, the passengers from the Pullman cars get off slowly, to stretch their legs. They are bound from Victoria to Toronto, Montreal or Quebec. The clangor of the lunch bell has no appeal for them. They have dined earlier and luxuriously as the train ran full speed through the northern wastes.

The dissonance of the bell swells and swells. It is a focal cry for miles on either hand. Distant woodsmen hear it and know that the major drams of the day is being enacted at the station. It rouses the crows in the virgin timber. The latest brood of ducklings in the wilderness pond, around the next bend, scurries to cover. And meanwhile the surrest described the surrest described in the surre pond, around the next bend, scurries to cover. And meanwhile the surge of day-coach passengers continues into the little lunchroom, where the proprietor, his wife, daughter and hired girl work frantically.

Passengers have been saving their hunger for sound of that bell. On the yard-long time-table of the Canadian National, this station is marked with an asterisk. Only a few of the stations, which make up columns and columns of print along the 3000-mile journey, have that asterisk. It means: Food Served. Its effect is potent. The forward cars empty themselves along the siding.

There is wilderness on either side of the track. Somewhere, far to the south, lies Lake Superior. But to the north there is nothing at all; there is no other line of railroad track between this spot and the north pole itself!

railroad track between this spot and the north pole itself Only wilderness, growing more and more barren.

A house or two stands behind the station; a dirt road leads off beside the track; there is a freight train, used as sleeping quarters for the section crew; a water tower—that is all. The country is flat, with second-growth timber that is all. The country is nat, with second-growth timber that still shows the sign of that earlier tide of pioneers who swept the big trees away as they passed. Now, for miles and miles along the track, forest fires have taken their additional toll, leaving only brittle spars charred at the base, and gaunt as masts.

The first passenger who entered the lunch room come out, two minutes later, wiping his mouth. He is a bronzed French Canadian. Instinctively, he turns and faces north. There is a pull about that north country that tugs the imagination toward it like a compass, still. Back of those lakes and forests extend Hudson Bay and the arctic circle, and all that lies between and beyond. There are prospectors up there, and trappers, and primitive Indian villages, and a trooper or two, with scarlet jacket, and lakes uncounted, and mosquitoes, and unfished streams, and, in winter, a great, overpowering whiteness whose silent solitude is riven by appalling storms. Now it is midsummer, and the heat lies heavy.

The traveling salesman from London walks forward from the observation car with the young American tourist. The New York banker, who, with his wife and two little girls have crossed from Chicago to Los Angeles and are now taking the northern route home, by the way of the park at Jasper, joins them. They speak to the red-faced youngster—a mere boy—who got off the train with his knapsack. Yes, he is bound north, he says. He will plunge up through those woods, youder, with his partner. It will be part vacation, for he has another year yet at his mining school. That north country there, he assures them, is "chuck full" of untold minerals, of undiscovered mines.

The station boy has been ringing his bell all this time. Now he stope, suddenly. The engine gives an admonitory toot. And a minute later the station, marked with an asterisk, is only a memory to the long, swaying transcontinental train; while back on the platform a looely little boy, with a lunch bell, is looking after a cloud of dust and smoke and wondering what the outside world is like, of which this vanishing express train is the outward symbol.

If that small boy could look at the landscape through the eyes of some of the passengers, he would find his own world as amazing as the outside civilization is to him. For here, along the tracks of the great northern spur of the Canadian National Railway—that makes its are above 50 degrees latitude, almost from Winnipeg to Hearst, Ont.—a great new civilization is being born.

Essentially, it is the infiltration of French Canadians from Quebec Province, spreading westward along the government railroad. Because it is so far north, little has been said or written of it, but it has been going on increasingly in recent years. From the car, the drama of this new taming of the wilderness is visible in a series of swift scenes. At its beginning, it is a log-cabin life, not essentially different from that which the Puritans entered at Plymouth. But here the transition from cabins to frame at Plymouth. But here the transition from cabins to frame uses is a matter of years, not centuries. The soil is broken faster today.

At Plymouth Colony, the first rude huts faced the ocean; here they face the railroad. In each case the solitary settlers looked out on that avenue whence came news from home. Here, in the northland of Canada, one can well imagine what warmth of sentiment must greet the shine of the headlight of this same train—plowing through the blinding snowfall in the days of the winter that lie . . .

Behind the cabins is a rude dirt road, and then the Behind the cabins is a rude dirt road, and then the woods again. Every association hereabouts spreads laterally. There is no depth to this new settlement, and the crowding of clearings along the track gives a deceptive idea of population which does not really exist. The whole story of the social change, which a year or two of work will make for the French-Canadian family, is visible from the car window. Here, for instance, there is a rude hut set down in a tangle, with just enough trees and stumps cleared, so far, to give a tethered cow chance to range its circle. All the children wave at the thundering train There are many children; each child is an economic asset.

At the next clearing, things are more advanced. The field is level, with stumps grubbed out, and drainage canal cut; and the owner and his hired hand are working wildly behind a sweating team to make every minute of the short summer count. At the next clearing the log cabin is being enlarged, or rather it is being transformed into a two-story house, of which it forms one corner. The old cabin is literally being built into the new home. And at the next and next clearings, new barns are going up. New barns, apparently, come before new houses. In the last stage, the old cabin has been turned over to storage of grain, or to the livestock. The fields are planted; the wilderness is giving a livelihood.

From the World's Great Capitals—Berlin

R. RUDOLF MARTIN, who formerly filled a night post in the Reichs's Home Office, has made an exhaustive study of the distribution of wealth in Germany and publishes some interesting figures concerning the ten richest Germans of the present time. First on the list comes the former Kaiser, who, after all that he has been compelled to renounce, still retains some 205,000 acres of valuable land and a fortune of over 300,000 000 marks. Prince Albert of Thurn und Taxis owns 405,000 acres in Germany, Czechoślovakia, and Poland, and his fortune amounts to about 270,000,000 marks.

The richest German woman is still Frau Bertha Krupp von Bohlen und Halbach, whose fortune before the war amounted to 320,000,000 and now is 200,000,000. Fritz Thysen—another Ruhr magnate—possesses 140,000,000 marks and his younger brother 60,000,000. The Cologne iron king, Otto Wolff, has a fortune of 130,000,000, and Prince Hohenlohe-Oehringen and Prince Egon zu Fürstenberg run him very close. The fortune of Prince Henckel von Donnersmarck is estimated at 115,000,000 marks, and that of Prince Pless at 110,000,000; the latter is the greatest coal owner in Germany, possessing alto-gether 204,000 acres.

Tenth on the list of wealthy Germans comes Prince Friedrich Heinrich of Prussia, second cousin former Kaiser and son of the late Prince Albrecht; Regent of Braunschweig, who has vast possessions in Silesia and on the Rhine, while his palace in Berlin, where King Amanullah and King Fuad stayed when in the capital, is of no inconsiderable value.

Berlin has few traditional pageants such as, for instance, London's Lord Mayor's Show, but one that took place recently at Stralau on the Spree, once a fishing village, dates back, it is said, to the fourteenth century. It is called the Strahu Fischzug (fish procession) and its observance is attended by festivities lasting a whole week. So obstreperous, indeed, did this popular fête become that for some years it was prohibited, but since 1922 it has been revived, and today it is more decorously conducted than formerly.

The meadows round the Stralau village provide plenty of amusement in the way of shows and merry-go-rounds and fireworks galore illumine the night. A long procession opens the proceedings, with heralds and pages in historical costumes, a colossal fish—in cardboard—on a motor lorry leading the way, followed by the ancient fishermen's guild and as many persons in fancy dress as can obtain a mount. A post chaise of the good old times always brings up the rear. The real "Fischzug" is said to have originated with a village pastor 500 years ago. This good man, having received neither stipend nor any remuneration for his services for many years, devised the plan of an annual fishing on a large scale, the proceeds of which he demanded, and obtained, as his just right. . 1 1 1

An innovation that has met with general approval is the placing of telephones along the road for the use of motorists in case of need. At present only one road is provided with this convenience, that leading from Berlin to Leipzig, via Wittenberg and Bitterfeld, but it is expected that others will soon follow. Every four kilometers a tall white mast is erected, to which a locked telephone is attached; a notice high up and easily perceptible at a long distance bears the words, "Fernsprecher Auto Hille." The Auto Hilfe is the name of a society just organized whose aim is to come to the assistance of motorists. Any driver of an automobile who pays fifteen marks a year receives a key to the roadside telephone and is thus able to appeal directly to the nearest station for help in case of emergency.

Twenty "sweet girl graduates" have just left Berlin, where they have spent their summer holidays, for their rative country, France. This was due to the mediation of that very estimable body, the Liga für Menschenrechte. The French girls, the majority of whom are from Paris, are mostly studying to be teachers. They made their head-quarters the forest schoolhouse in Eichkamp, a few miles out of Berlin, where they had the companionship of German girl students. One and all have expressed themselves delighted with what they saw and heard in the German capital and its beautiful surroundings; the social and cultural aspects were exhaustively studied and they have returned to France sincere friends of their German hosts. One enthusiastic young Frenchwoman declared they would all tell the youth of their country that there surely was a peaceful and hardworking Germany.

A woman resident at Oberlmusen is receiving the congratulations of her friends on a piece of good fortune. The "Gruga," the great horticultural exhibition at Essen, which has been open for several weeks, passed receatly its five hundred thousandth visitor. This visitor, the Oberhausen woman, received in commemoration a handsome gold bracelet with sultable inscription. The astonished recipient was formally welcomed by the exhibition man-agement, and the bracelet was presented to her by Head

The former Museum of Natural History at Cassel is shortly to be reopened to the public after an interval of several years. The building—a handsome one in its way—has passed through many vicissitudes. It was built in 1605 by Landgrave Moritz the Wise and was the first court theater in Germany. It is chiefly interesting on nt of the fact that it was the first theater to pro duce plays by Shakespeare. These productions would appear to have been highly successful and gradually other theaters in Germany followed Cassel's example. The building served during the Thirty Years War as a military church and at the same time as a foundry for the casting machine, like manna, without money and without price, and knowing that they were destined not for the feet of the English children who helped to make them, but for the inhabitants of far corners of the earth, said, "Humanity is hhabitants of far corners of the survey measure of meal, starv-like a silly hen sitting on an empty measure of meal directly bahind ing to death, with a full measure of meal directly

Why Limit Production?

TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: Charles Kingsley, after watching shoes pour from the

Time has certainly justified the above declaration! While our machines are busy pouring out endless amounts of consumable goods, and our fertile fields, with the help of dern inventions, yield ever greater sarvests, still there is not an equable distribution of these clessings. And gov-ernments and big business, in their efforts to right this ernments and big business, in their efforts to right this situation, limit production in sugar, cotton, nitrates and a thousand other things useful to man.

It may be asked why men allow their governments to limit the production of the very things they need. A very discerning writer, Maurice Colburne, in his new book, "Unemployment or War" (Coward-McCann Publishing Company, 425 Fourth Avenue, New York City), has pointed out the reason. He says that though men are living in the twentieth century, they are thinking in the first century.

No one can doubt that machines are here. Although they

No one can doubt that machines are here. Although they are relieving men of excessive drudgery, which is a blessing—for man was not made to till the soil—to my sense they are taking away their wages, their buying power. This last feature of the machine's function, as I see it, deprives men of the bleesing of leisure, for if they cannot touch the goods the machines make, because they have neither wages nor salary to enable them to do so, they are really no better off.

The above-mentioned book proposes for this dilemma a reform in the accounting system of industry. Of this reform another economist says: "The promise this accounting system holds out for the human race is beyond calculation. It would not only put an end to labor troubles, and in so doing remove all fear of internal disruption; it would also doing remove all fear of internal disruption; it would also change international trade from being a struggle for trade terminating in war... into a friendly exchange of superfluities, bringing advantage to all concerned, and doing harm to none.... It (this new accounting system) could be introduced within a few weeks of its adoption by the country. By this system the Government has it in its power to solve the unemployment problem, reduce retail prices far below the 1914 level (recoup producers with a rebate of costs), and put everyone beyond the reach of wank within less than a year."
